School Software Group Partners with Missouri Association of Rural Education

APPLETON, WI. (March 13, 2018) – School Software Group has teamed up with the Missouri Association of Rural Education (MARE) to bring BuildYourOwnCurriculum (BYOC)—a world-class curriculum and assessment framework—to school districts throughout the state of Missouri.

BYOC enables districts to bring the teaching—and learning—experience into an evolving documented process that is easy to use, accessible anywhere, and aligned district-wide. By simply entering curriculum once, then continuously assessing and improving, educators can save time on curriculum management, enter a process of continuous improvement, and shift focus to their true passion—teaching. It also provides access for parents and students to view assignments, participate in discussion groups, view announcements and events, and take online district-defined assessments.

School Software Group and BYOC already collaborate with 16 other educational organizations across the country. The recent partnership with MARE will expose rural districts across Missouri to the advantages of the same award-winning curriculum tools already utilized by many Missouri districts. And, help them to develop and implement local standards-based curricula, assessments and instruction with a systematic process for sustaining, revising and improving it long term.

School Software Group is an educational technology company focused on the success of K-12 school districts. Their award-winning web-based software, BuildYourOwnCurriculum (BYOC), is currently being used in over 500 districts across the country. With a strong focus on product innovation and simplicity, School Software Group works closely with district partners integrating the latest technology with ever-changing education standards to address the challenges facing today’s educators.
